FCIC Announces
a New Graduate-Level Course

Issues & Trends in Developmental Disabilities

(#MHS 6900.002)

This exciting interdisciplinary course will provide students with a rich curriculum that addresses health, social, cultural, and economic issues related to developmental disabilities across the life span.

Further, it will address trends in policy, legislation, and services that impact these very critical issues. This 3-credit course will be taught by interdisciplinary faculty, including individuals with disabilities and family members involved in advocacy and policy efforts. Course components include:

- Face-to-face meetings
- Interactive class activities
- A dedicated project of practical application in developmental disabilities

Stipends will be available upon course completion

Instructors: Bobbie Vaughn, PhD, BCBA
Liz Perkins, PhD, RNMH

Location: MHC 1503

Time/Day: Summer Session C (May 18 - July 21)
Wednesdays 5-8 pm
